More Than A Decade With Us

Once again this year, we are celebrating all those pellet producers and traders who became certified over 10 years ago and have remained loyal to the scheme ever since. One of these companies is the Croatian pellet producer Pelet Grupa d.o.o., and you can read their inspiring story here.

Interview

The secretary general of Bioenergy Europe, Jean-Marc Jossart, recalls the scheme's early days, and reveals how the scheme became so important in the market today in this interview.

Consumer feedback

According to the results of our latest survey which aimed at collecting feedback from end users, 87% of the pellet consumers who are aware of ENplus® consider it important when purchasing pellets. Find out more about it here.

Progetto Fuoco and European Pellet Forum 2026

Progetto Fuoco is taking place this week in Verona and we can't wait to see you at our corner, where we will give away branded gifts as part of the scheme's 15th anniversary. This year, the European Pellet Forum 2026 will be part of the international trade fair and will take place on 27 February 2026. Check out a sneak peek of the presentations that will be given here.

FAQ

If you have doubts about the scheme's procedures or requirements, do not hesitate to visit our FAQ page, where you can find the answers to your questions. The page is divided into sections to guide you to the topic you are interested in.

Do you know?

Biomass heating systems are becoming an increasingly popular option for Italian families. Wood and pellets are already widely used for heating, with one in four families relying on them, particularly in rural areas and small municipalities.

Biomass is also perceived as a more cost-effective and sustainable alternative to gas. For this reason, over 50% of families would consider installing a biomass system, with pellets emerging as the most popular fuel. Learn more about it.
